Dairy Update.

3 November 2021

A hop, skip and a jump.

- Dairy prices jumped overnight, building on recent price gains.
- The price strength reflects weak global dairy production.
- The strong result introduces some upside risk to our 2021/22 farmgate milk price forecast of $8.50/kg.
- However, that upside is tempered, given that at $8.50/kg, we suspect that the milk price is getting towards the upper limit of what Fonterra can pay.

GlobalDairyTrade auction results

	Change since last auction	Prices USD/ tonne
Whole Milk Powder (WMP)	2.7%	$3,921
Skim Milk Powder (SMP)	6.6%	$3,627
Anhydrous Milk Fat (AMF)	4.2%	$6,384
Butter	4.7%	$5,350
GDT Price Index	4.3%	1,310

Dairy auction prices jumped overnight. Overall prices lifted 4.3%, while key whole milk powder (WMP) prices lifted by 2.7%.

The jump in prices builds on gains over September and October. Overall prices and WMP prices have lifted 12% and 10%, respectively since August. In both cases, prices now sit 30% or more above year ago levels. Taking a longer-term perspective, prices are around 20% above their five-year average.

The price strength overnight was broad based. Six out of the seven products that we monitor posted price gains. Cheddar prices led the gains, surging 14.1%. Skim milk powder prices posted the next biggest gain, jumping 6.6%. Meanwhile, butter and anhydrous milk fat prices both posted gains of 4% or more.

The result was largely in line with expectations. Prior to the auction, the futures market had indicated a circa 4% lift in WMP prices, while we pencilled in a 2% rise back on Friday.

From here, we expect that ongoing weakness in global dairy production will continue to underpin global dairy prices. New Zealand dairy production over September was down 4.0% compared to September 2020. In addition, anecdotes suggest that this production weakness has continued through October, while dairy production in other key exporting regions is similarly soft.

The strong result introduces some upside risk to our 2021/22 farmgate milk price forecast of $8.50/kg. Notably, anything at this price level or above would be a record high, beating the previous record of $8.40/kg set back in the 2013/14 season.

We do add a note of caution though. At $8.50/kg we believe that the milk price is getting towards the upper limit of what Fonterra can pay. There are two factors in play in this regard. Firstly, the higher the milk price the harder it becomes for Fonterra's consumer businesses. In that sense, Fonterra could cap the milk price to prevent losses in these other businesses. The other factor is that Fonterra has limited processing capacity for its various products. In 2013/14 for example, we saw that Fonterra was constrained in product mix choices and therefore not fully able to take advantage of very high WMP prices over that season.
